ABSTRACT

In this article, information on the role of the environment in the family in the formation of the child's personality is highlighted.

KEYWORDS

Intergenerational relations, concept of generation, old age, continuity. child personality.

INTRODUCTION

Intergenerational relations and family are the most important factors influencing the formation of personality. In the family, children join life simply and naturally. The family provides the basis for understanding the world from the first years when the child learns moral values, social norms and cultural traditions. It is known that the socio-spiritual environment in the family is a mirror of the state of society. It, in turn, forms the basis of a strong, stable, prosperous state. The society develops stably only when the family is strong, peaceful, prosperous and healthy. The family performs certain functions: it provides all the conditions for the child's physical development; participates in the formation of his personality; creates the foundations of ethical behavior approved by society; instills love for art, thereby developing creative interests.

Purpose: to study and analyze information on concepts such as the concept of intergenerational relations, old age, intergenerational unity.

MATERIAL ANALYSIS

Parents influence the child's behavior by encouraging or condemning certain types of behavior, as well as by applying punishment or allowing an acceptable level of freedom in the child's behavior. Communication in the family allows the child to develop his views, norms, attitudes and ideas. In a person's family life, the feeling of love and mutual understanding, recognition, respect and security is most clearly manifested. However, meeting one's own needs is related to the performance of certain family functions.

Factors affecting the child's development process: Family and parents, environment, information environment, child's characteristic qualities, personal motivation.

The family encourages some personal actions and prevents others, satisfies or suppresses personal needs. Family provides opportunities for security, enjoyment, and self-realization. It shows the boundaries of identity and helps the emergence of the image of the individual "I". Several factors play an important role in the formation of personality: geographical, national, school, family and social environment, heredity and material living conditions. Key words: person, factors, environment, society, heredity, self-concept. The main factors of development are biological and social. Biological factors affecting the development and formation of personality include heredity.

ANALYSIS AND RESULTS

Intergenerational family upbringing plays an important role in the development of a child in the future, the child first builds the image of society in the family, the rights and duties, worldview and moral views of the future citizen are formed in the family, on this basis, he matures physically and spiritually. will find. For a child, a healthy social-spiritual environment in the family is a source of cultural-spiritual and moral values, traditions, social-life experiences, skills and qualifications. It is refined in the process of family education, the essence of education is to prepare a person for life, and the content, direction, purpose and function of education depend on the social relations of people. Based on these relationships, a person looks at life in a certain way, understands the world through his thinking and forms his attitude towards it, is educated in the spirit of certain moral criteria, because family education, compared to social education, deeply affects the spiritual world, character and feelings of children. affects. Paying attention to family, morals and education is one of the duties that are ingrained in our blood. The proverb "One child has seven neighboring parents" is typical of our nation. This proverb itself shows how important it is for us to raise children and take care of the family. Residents of the neighborhood, especially the elderly, never passed by a child doing dirty work on the street, and immediately reprimanded him and called him to the right path. After all, our holy religion, which commands to be beautiful, polite, well-behaved in every way, to purify the soul, gives great importance to the family. So, how important is the role of the family in the education of our children? First of all, parents themselves should set an example for their children in terms of behavior and behavior.

Because the environment in the family becomes stable when parents feel their responsibilities. In order for children to grow up to be polite, together with their parents, the neighborhood is a great example school. It is not for nothing that our people say, "What one sees in a bird's nest, one does." A parent who is raising a child should be able to demonstrate noble qualities in every movement, posture, behavior, and interaction with others. Because the child is extremely imitative and observant by nature. That is why those around him influence them with their habits, sometimes without realizing it. Rough relationships in the family, a lot of lying, unpleasant behavior create an unhealthy environment that negatively affects the upbringing of a child.

CONCLUSION

In the process of raising the young generation in the family environment, parents should try to prevent these diseases from sprouting in their children. It is the responsibility of the teachers of the school where their children are educated to guide parents and help ensure the effectiveness of education in the family environment.
